Hi Lloyd,

This is estimate 3. It's a little different, and a lot cheaper, because it involves buying the light parts, and some paint, from a Honda dealer, and a guy who works at Firestone on S. State St. in Westerville (where my last car was a lot; his name is Jeff Daily) installing it on the side. I would paint it myself. I'm not much of a painter at all, but it's just one little scratch; the big thing was getting matching paint from Honda. It should take a few minutes.

The 2 other estimates are, in my opinion, involving stuff that doesn't need to be done. I'm fine with this. (One or both wanted to paint the whole bumper.)

The total price would include:

Right tail lamp assembly	$213.98
Right backup lamp assembly	$216.78
Paint	$19.87
Tax on all the above	$36.05
Labor	$80.00

TOTAL	$566.68
--------------	-----------------

The next 2 pages are invoices from Roush Honda to document everything but the labor. I don't have anything to document the labor, but if you would like me to, I can write up something saying it's $80, have Jeff sign it, and send you a copy.

If you agree to this, you could pay any of these ways:

PayPal (you would need my email address, milnoid@gmail.com)

CashApp (username milnoid)

Venmo (username milnoid)

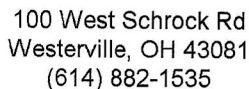

I could come over and pick up cash.

If you have some other way, let me know.

Please let me know what you think about this.
